Here is where the Law of Value comes into play, in the form of a "sucous" deduction. In a restaurant, the $800 profit of the two people who made your meal is subtracted from your $1.000 profit, where $1.000 means $1. The remaining $800 represents the $800 "sweetness" of the meal, as opposed to the 1,000 grams of sugar and 100 calories that is supposed to be added to the meal itself. It is therefore possible for the tax to be avoided if you buy less than $1000 to eat your meal, but in fact, you need at least half that amount if you want to count the sweetness. However, you can offset this loss of "sweetness" with some "sucous" activity by using up all but $2000 worth of "sweetness" from one of the four categories of income for the year.
